

Zimbabwe Republic Police

A trail of Violence

1 January 2007 to 15 March 2007

1. Introduction

All opposition forces in Zimbabwe and beyond our borders have been, for a long time, working either individually, separately or jointly in strategising for regime change in Zimbabwe. These forces include the following:

- ❖ Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) anti-Senate
- ❖ Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) pro-Senate
- ❖ National Constitutional Assembly (NCA)
- ❖ Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU)
- ❖ Crisis Coalition in Zimbabwe
- ❖ Women/Men of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA/MOZA)
- ❖ Zimbabwe National Students Union (ZINASU)
- ❖ Zimbabwe Lawyers for Human Rights
- ❖ Christian Alliance

When all these opposition forces realised that their concerted effort and agenda for regime change, were not bearing desired results; with advice from their sponsors and supporters in the West, they came up with the Broad Alliance whose agenda is still the same- to mobilise people for regime change in Zimbabwe.

The Broad Alliance's defiance campaign for regime change and overthrow of the democratically elected Government of Zimbabwe has resulted in a plethora of criminal activities and political violence in the country, especially in Harare, where people have been attacked, buses stoned and cars burned to ashes, police officers seriously injured, etc as seen in some pictures below.

2. Activities of the Opposition Broad Alliance

The leaders of all these opposition forces have been addressing numerous meetings across the country, drumming support for anti-Government activities and civil disobedience. With the hardships being faced by the people of Zimbabwe, the opposition forces intensified their campaign hoping to capitalise on these hardships. It has been observed that financial inducement is being used to attract people to attend meetings and participate in demonstrations. The pie chart below illustrates the distribution and levels of participation of each of the opposition forces in criminal activities.

Some of the incidents contained in this document confirm this.

CONCLUSION

It remains a fact that the MDC inclined Save Zimbabwe Campaign also known as the Broad Alliance is a puppet grouping of Western powers who have since stepped up their efforts to effect regime change in Zimbabwe. As mentioned in the preceding segments, though the Save Zimbabwe Campaign sympathisers enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunity, the Government should treat them with caution.

The events and incidents narrated and pictured above are a clear testimony that the opposition forces under the Save Zimbabwe Campaign Project are on a confrontation path. They no longer have respect for law and order. Intelligence at hand indicates that they want to continue targeting the government and members of the security forces especially those who reside in high-density areas. It is reported that the opposition would want to put pressure on landlords to evict members of the security forces who are their tenants. There is need for decisive action to be taken against the organisers of these illegal actions. Whilst arrests are made, there appears to be no support from the judiciary who continue to either release accused persons on either free or make them pay very small bail, allowing them to go out and continue with their illegal activities. Meanwhile the culprits continue to receive massive moral and material support from Western countries and the European Union.
